

Heiselman, Haver Open Campaigns At GOP Meeting

Mayor Points at Municipal Improvements in His Bid for Re-election in November

Haver Replies

Haver Remarks DeWitt Is Harmless; Schwenk Also Speaks

Citing the lowest tax rates in 10 years with no curtailment of municipal service, more men kept at work, better street lighting, improved police and fire protection, new schools built and a municipal stadium completed were some of the accomplishments as pointed out by Mayor C. J. Heiselman in an address Friday evening at the opening meeting and rally of the Republican Club.

The rally was also marked by a brief address by N. LeVan Haver, who replied briefly to public statements made by his Democratic opponent. Mr. Haver said he had attended high school with his opponent when a boy and that DeWitt "had been harmless then and was harmless now."

Attorney Louis G. Bruhn was re-elected president of the club. The other officers re-elected were: Vice-president, Mrs. Mary Otto, and secretary-treasurer, Charles W. Shultis. The club will meet again next Thursday evening in Cook's Hall on Broadway avenue and will hold weekly meetings hereafter until election.

Promises Made and Kept

It is entirely appropriate that public officials seeking re-election should make an accounting of their stewardship to the electors. In other words, that the head of the organization should make a report to the membership so that they may judge for themselves the extent and value of what has been accomplished.

Two years ago I made a similar accounting to the voters and they made their decision. By their votes they gave a clear-cut endorsement and approval of what I had done for the city and what I was trying to do.

Two years ago I promised to give to my job the same tireless devotion, the same type of public service, the same business principles in government, the same humane understanding and treatment of problems affecting the unemployed and those in distress, the same development of public improvements and community service that characterized my previous term.

Two years ago I promised that two new school buildings would be built to solve the congestion problem and give our youth an opportunity to learn crafts and trades, the better to fit them for the responsibilities of life.

Two years ago I promised that a suitable municipal stadium would be built, and that this stadium and the two schools, when finished, would meet with the approval of the people.

These were not insincere promises made for political purposes and to catch votes. They were solemnly made as verbal contracts with the people and they have been conscientiously carried out.

3 Firemen Injured At Ellenville; One In Bad Condition

Accidents Happen During Annual Parade; Men Attempt to Reach 'Burning' House

Accidents to three firemen, as the result of which one is reported in a serious condition in the hospital in Ellenville, marred the parade held in connection with the annual inspection of the fire department in that village Thursday.

Abram McEntee, an Ellenville fireman, suffered serious injuries while attempting to assist Fred Hall of Enterprise Steamer Company of Walden, who had fallen over a cliff when the men were attempting to reach a supposedly burning house after leaving the parade line of march.

McEntee was taken to the village hospital while Hall is receiving medical treatment at his home.

The fire proved to be in a decayed tree high up on the mountain side.

Jack Kehoe, a member of Enterprise Steamer Co., suffered minor injuries when he fell through the floor of a building under construction in Main street. He is under treatment in his home in Walden.

Says Americans Belonged to Finland, Oct. 14 (AP)—A former official of the Soviet Trading Corporation in the United States told the House committee investigating un-American activities today that some Americans were members of the Ogpu, Russian secret police.

The witness, Robert Pitofsky, now a New York electrician, gave the information during testimony on the operations of Amtorg, the Soviet trading organization, and the extent to which it cooperated with the communist party of the United States. He said he had been transport control manager for the agency for four years.

He said this would be obtained from advance rentals from exhibitors and concessionaires, other sources and the $500,000 cash balance.

Gibson said that an economy drive in the management had reduced daily operating expenses from $80,650 to $41,000 but that no additional payments would be made this year to reduce the bond indebtedness.

He announced that Grover Whalen, whose executive and fiscal duties he has taken over, would remain as president of the exposition next year. Whalen is now in Europe arranging 1940 contracts with foreign exhibitors.

The fair so far has reported a total attendance of 28,853,000, of which 22,639,915 were paid admissions.

Headless Body Found in Dreary Swamp Causes Speculation on Ohio's Killer

New Castle, Pa., Oct. 14 (AP)—Finding of the headless and nude body of a young girl in a dreary "murder swamp" developed the possibility today that Cleveland's "mad butcher" had claimed another victim.

Coroner Charles Byers said the girl had been slain probably two weeks ago then partially buried in an apparent attempt to conceal her identity. A single stocking found nearby offered investigators their only clue.

The head, severed cleanly with either a sharp knife or ax, was not located in a hurried search along the Pennsylvania-Ohio state line. A detail of state police was asked to aid in the hunt.

The scene was the setting of six similar and unsolved slayings of men and women, one of them decapitated, in the past decade.

The swamp is 100 miles from Cleveland where a cruel slayer's headless victims have turned up in dumps the last six years. Cleveland authorities were summoned on the theory the girl's death might be linked with the torso murders.

Aged Dallas Engineer Is Killed In Plunge From Rondout Bridge

Robert V. Vivian, 71, Ends Life at 5 P. M. Friday; Body Is Recovered From Barge Slip

Robert V. Vivian, 71, retired Dallas, Texas, electrical engineer, ended his life about 5 o'clock Friday afternoon when he is supposed to have leaped from the Rondout Creek bridge into the slip separating the island Dock from the main land. His body was recovered from the waters of the slip an hour later after police, firemen and members of the Central Hudson Gas & Electric Corporation's emergency crew had dragged the waters of the creek.

Mr. Vivian had been visiting his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Archibald of 203 Washington avenue, and while there was taken ill about a week ago and removed to the Benedictine Hospital Thursday evening. He was to have undergone an operation later in the week.

Disappears From Hospital

The aged man disappeared from his room in the hospital shortly after 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The police department was asked by the hospital authorities to assist in locating him. Shortly after receiving the telephone call from the hospital the police received word that a man had either fallen or jumped off the bridge into the waters of the slip.

Anthony Elston, a cook in a downtown restaurant, while driving his car through Dock street heard a splash and turning saw a man's body reappear on the surface of the slip and then disappear beneath the water.

Noting the approximate spot where he first saw the body Mr. Elston directed grappling operations. The body was recovered about 6 o'clock by Charles Blanchard of 22 St. Mary's street and Nick Plumley of 19 West Strand.

Body Is Examined

The body, identified as that of the missing man, was examined by Dr. Chester B. Van Gassebeck, who attributed death as due to drowning. Later the body was turned over to A. Carr & Son, funeral directors of Pearl street.

Surviving are his wife, one daughter, Mrs. Archibald, and son, Robert Vivian of New York city.

Mr. Vivian had been an electrical engineer for 30 years in the employ of the General Electric Co. in the south, and had retired several years ago.

Mr. Vivian and his wife had been visiting in this vicinity for some time. They had been with the Archibald family for several weeks and then had left to make other visits, returning to Kingston last week.

A theory advanced as to why Mr. Vivian ended his life was that he had been delirious and in great pain, and was temporarily derailed when he disappeared from the hospital.

Coroner Norwin R. Lasher of Saugerties issued a verdict of suicide by drowning.

Body Is Recovered

New York, Oct. 14 (AP)—Police last night recovered from the Hudson river the body of John T. Wanamaker, 35, only person to lose his life when the streamlined yacht Q.E.D., owned by Airplane Designer Anthony Fokker, burned and sank seven days ago.

The yacht was destroyed near Yonkers, N. Y. Wanamaker was one of the 11 persons, including a young honeymooning couple, who escaped. Wanamaker's body was found near the foot of 246th street.

Woman Is Killed

New York, Oct. 14 (AP)—A woman tentatively identified from papers in her clothing as Mrs. Julia Stuart, 40, was killed early today in a headfirst plunge from a moving automobile at 54th street and Park avenue. Police, who listed the cause as suicide, said occupants in the car said they had met the woman earlier in the evening at an east side tavern, and that she had expressed a desire to kill herself.

Announcement Comes Day After British Report of Sinking of Three Nazi U-Boats

Front Is Quiet

Rain and Fog Settle Over the French and German Lines

(By The Associated Press)

Germany scored her second undisputed major success in her campaign against Britain's naval might today with the sinking of the battleship Royal Oak.

The loss of the 29,150-ton, heavily-armed warship, one of the 15 capital ships in the British navy, was announced by the admiralty in a terse communique which expressed belief she was the victim of "U-boat action."

The British admiralty announced this afternoon that approximately 370 men thus far had been saved from the sunken battleship Royal Oak. The warship's complement, it said, was approximately 1,200 men.

This left 830 missing, far in excess of the loss of 515 men September 17 when the aircraft carrier Courageous was torpedoed by a German submarine.

Ark Royal Is Listed

Less than a month ago, on September 17, the aircraft carrier Courageous went down with a loss of 515 men after being torpedoed by a German submarine. Genialists maintained that subsequent to the aircraft carrier Ark Royal was sunk—something the British refused to admit and cited as a German submarine.

News of the disaster came only a day after Britain had acclaimed victories for herself on sea by announcing the sinking of three German submarines.

The western front meanwhile continued the scene of minor activity and rain and fog settled over the lines.

The French explained the destruction of three Rhine bridges as a precautionary measure against possible surprise attack by German forces reported massed in sufficient strength for a large scale offensive.

German Announcement

The German army supreme command announced complete occupation of the German sphere of influence carved out of Poland.

In the west it said there was only "minor artillery activity" but it reported three enemy planes had been shot down.

German consultation with Soviet Russia and Italy were reported under way, preliminary to a decision on the next step in the European war now at the end of its sixth week.

Soviet Russia, temporarily deferring further negotiations with Finland, concentrated on her consultations with Turkey, represented in Moscow by her Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu.

Observers in the Russian capital expected a Russian-Turkish agreement on control of the Black Sea and the Dardanelles would be reached at any moment.

Finland warily weighed the implications of her negotiations with her Soviet neighbor, meanwhile extending her emergency precautions. Two members of the Swedish party were added to the cabinet, increasing the government's strength in Parliament.

At the same time she was preparing for a conference of the chiefs of state of the northern states called for next Wednesday in Stockholm.

Four-Point Program

Col. Lindbergh, in an address last night over a radio (Mutual) network, recommended a four-point program:

1. An embargo on offensive weapons and munitions.

2. The prohibition of American shipping from the belligerent countries of Europe and their danger zones.

3. The refusal of credit to belligerent nations or their agents.

4. Turning to the question of hemisphere defense, the famous flier said:

"This western hemisphere is our domain. Let there be no compromise about our right to defend or trade within this area. If it is challenged by any nation, the answer must be war. Our policy of neutrality should have this as its foundation."

"We desire the utmost friendship with the people of Canada. If their country is ever attacked, our navy will be defending their seas, our soldiers will fight on their battlefields, our fliers will die in their skies."

Balloon Test Flights

Aid Airplane Pilots

Meteorologists who watch varicolored balloons float into the sky are responsible for the most accurate method devised for guiding airplane pilots through hazardous winds, according to Elbert F. Corwin, Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute meteorologist.

The new technique, with its narrow margin of error, is expected to prevent fliers from encountering violent up-winds and treacherous down-drafts that sometimes suck planes into mountainsides. Pilots will know at which levels they may fly to avoid the currents.

Corwin said that the new method utilized a geometrical principle, determining a distance through angles. Weather observers at present base calculations on an assumption that balloons always rise about 600 feet per minute.

Corwin and two student assistants, at the request of the United States weather bureau, for months sent colored balloons into the air and observed their flight to heights of five miles and distances of from 10 to 17 miles.

It was found that "up and down" winds accelerated, slowed, or even reversed, the balloons' normal rate of climb. Thus, the Rensselaer findings showed, the pilot of an airplane might encounter violent winds by trying to avoid them, because winds, reported at 10,000 feet, might really be at 8,000 or 12,000 feet.

The new method utilizes a small balloon tied by a 100-foot line to the main "sounding" balloon. A special theodolite, similar to those used by weather observers and surveyors to study angles, would then measure the angle between it and the two balloons. Calculations then determine its within relatively few feet their height.

Government Is Planning Housing Census in 1940

A national housing census, the first of its kind to be attempted in the history of the nation, will be taken in 1940 in conjunction with the individual count, following action by congress in the final period of the last session.

According to E. L. Ostendorf, president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, the census is "bound to be of far-reaching importance as a fact foundation for private enterprise, both as to new construction and as to rebuilding of existing construction. Most important, the data will be made available for each community.

"Because of the practical importance of having local data made available as early as possible," Ostendorf said, "the association will ask that the time of completing the census be moved forward."

Reporting on the bill, the senate committee on banking and currency stated: "Investment in housing represents one-fourth of our national wealth. In the form of either loans, commitments or guarantees, the federal government has an interest of approximately $10,000,000 in housing. Yet this is the one branch of our national economy where reliable statistical information is sorely lacking."

The count of dwelling structures and dwelling units is restricted in the bill to a collection of the most significant factual statistics.

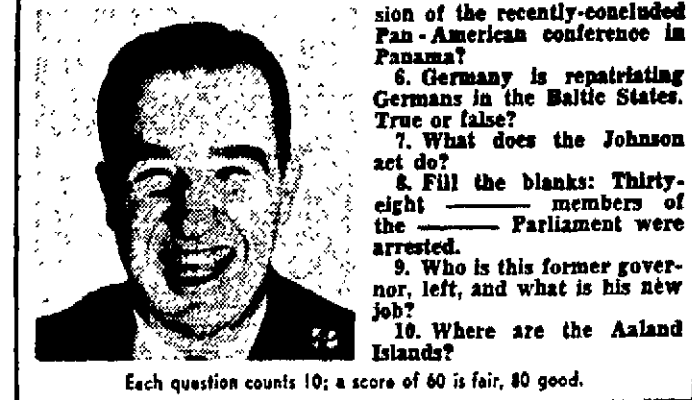

First Submarine Poisons

The navy department says that the first use of submersible poisons was in salvaging H. M. cruiser Gladiator, a British vessel, by the Liverpool Salvage association, under Capt. Fred W. Young, in 1908. In salvaging this vessel large steel cylinders were fastened to the submerged portion of the cruiser in such a way as to increase her buoyancy. The cylinders were built of steel plates and bars and were 12 feet in diameter. They varied in length from 40 feet to 75 feet. The cylinders were tested to 25 pounds per square inch. The outer skin was sheathed with wood and the ends were protected by collision matting. These steel cylinders had special valves to admit water for the purpose of sinking them and separate valves for the admission of air to drive out the water when it was desired to refloat them.

County Rates High Among State's Apple-Growing Area

Close to Million Bushels Produced Yearly in Ulster

Many Varieties Are Grown in Orchards of Valley; Crop Is Valued at Nearly $2,000,000

Most of autumn's gold and red is gone with the wind before the first snowfall each year in this land of bountiful harvests, but many trees which now lend flaming hues to the seasonal effect produce less ephemeral colors.

The reds, yellows and even greens which come each year through the watchful guidance of men skilled in agriculture find their way to city and country homes where they remain an important part of homelife until other crops are due.

These more lasting colors are given by nature to the apple, which is top among favorite fruits in the nation and the most picturesque at harvest time in such areas as Ulster county.

Named in Fables

The apple, almost since it first became known to man has been a symbol of rare beauty. It has been used in such phrases as "the apple of his eye," and it was given mention in the early Greek fables, one of which gave special significance to "the golden apple."

Even before the ancient Greeks paid special honor to this fruit, however, it seemed to come in for some mention with the story of creation itself and some prefer it to the fig in telling the story of Adam and Eve.

Here in the fertile lands of the Hudson Valley the apple has thrived almost every year since the days of the earliest settlers on a bumper crop basis and Ulster county, within recent years has been rated high among the apple-producing counties of the state.

More than 2,000 listed growers now produce nearly 1,000,000 bushels a year and the estimated value of the industry is set at nearly $2,000,000.

Valued at $1,955,183

Figures given after a census taken in 1930 placed the value of the industry then at $1,955,183. That same census showed a total acreage of 20,312 used by local farmers in the growing of apples.

Another census taken in 1935 showed a yield of 737,063 bushels in the county. Then there were 47,856 fruit-bearing trees and 141,397 of non-bearing acre. At that time also the census showed a total of 2,443 Ulster county farmers engaged in apple-growing on a small or large basis.

This year the crop was reported as lower than other years because of the drought of last summer, but the yield generally was not considered dangerously affected. Edwin T. Doyle, superintendent of the Major O. R. Hiltbrant farm at Port Ewen, reported that crop there this year lower than that of last year, but he indicated that the shortage would not mean a serious financial set-back to area growers.

The Hiltbrant orchard extends over an area of between 85 and 90 acres and the average yearly yield is between 15,000 and 20,000 bushels. Many other farms in the county grow apples in orchards ranging from an acre or two to more than 100 acres and several farms are devoted exclusively to apple-growing.

Many Employed

A crew of from 40 to 50 men is employed for eight weeks at the Hiltbrant farm during the harvest and others are given employment during the growing season assisting in the work of spraying the trees and looking after the general up-keep of the orchard.

Many other crews of apple pickers are kept busy during harvest time and for several other months of the year. Spraying starts each year in March and conditions at almost regular intervals until July and as many as seven sprayings are given in the average orchard to prevent serious damage by insects.

One apple grower reported three separate broods of the codling moth this year because of the summer drought. This insect "stings" the apple early in the growing season and later a worm begins its damaging work of boring into the core.

Large Shares Lost

Often as much as 75 per cent of an apple crop is lost when an orchard is infested with the codling moth and most farmers are ceaseless in their efforts to prevent spread of the insects.

Most of the apple growers of the county are concentrated in the region south and west of Kingston. The larger orchards are in the vicinity of New Paltz, Highland and Marlborough, although a few other large farms in scattered sections of the county are substantial apple growers.

Packed in Orchards

At such farms as that of Major Hiltbrant in Port Ewen, the apples are picked and packed in boxes in the orchard. They are then carted to a temporary storage room to await shipment after the buyers place orders. Many of the farmers ship out the apples on their own trucks while some growers hire truckmen or have them picked up by some of the larger buyers.

Buyers this year were expected to make comparatively late trips to the orchards because of a sustained spell of almost summer weather. Cold weather early in the harvest season, one grower said, generally brings out the buyers at an earlier date.

Many of the growers in the southern part of the county, ship their apples to the larger cold storage plants for a later market,

Ulster's Big Apple Business Rates High in Nation's Output

Scenes which have been familiar in the county since it first ranked high among the productive areas of the nation are currently repeated in hundreds of apple orchards where almost every known variety of apple is grown. Large crews of men who started work earlier in the season will continue on the job until next month picking and packing some of the finest fruit grown in the east. Many bushels of apples will be shipped immediately to the markets of larger eastern cities and some will be stored for sale later in the year. Shown above, top left, are two of the pickers in the Major O. R. Hiltbrant orchard at Port Ewen. They are taking apples from the picking pails and packing them in standard-size crates. At top center, one of the pickers is shown at work up a tree and at right is a general view of one section of the orchard. The inset represents a typical pail of apples freshly picked. At lower left is the Cameron fruit stand along route 9-W at Ulster Park and at right is a view of the storage room at the Hiltbrant farm with Edwin T. Doyle, superintendent of the farm, checking the packed crates.

13 ON THE 13TH—AND FRIDAY, TOO

Jimmy Duffy, Jr., was 13 on Friday the 13th, but he decided he's pretty lucky, even if encased in a cast that keeps him rigid from hips to toes. Physicians at a Philadelphia hospital say he'll recover from a rare, dreaded "golden bug" blood infection when he's been in the cast several weeks longer and they gave him a new cast which permits him to lie on his stomach part of the time. Jimmy's already had 40 blood transfusions and a major operation.

Flashes of Life Sketched in Brief

(By The Associated Press)

What To Do
Boston—A lady who knew nothing about etiquette was crawling around on her hands and knees in a hotel room last night—engaged with a situation which didn't exactly fit any of the rules.

A photographer had dropped a piece of his camera and needed help in finding it.
So Emily Post got down on all fours and helped.

Wheeled Phantom
Fayetteville, N. C.—A driverless curb-parked automobile startled pedestrians here by suddenly moving up on the sidewalk and heading for a jewelry shop display window.

A passerby quickly grabbed the emergency brake before any damage was done. Police said a short circuit had started the car.

Deceased
Tulsa—Relatives claiming benefits for a deceased worker failed to note his social security number. They told Charles L. Wilson, manager of the social security bureau office.

"His number was in the vest pocket of the suit we buried him in."

A former employer furnished the number.

Happy
Seattle—Someone telephoned police a man was walking around "in a dazed condition."
Investigation officers reported: "Man, O. K. His girl just told him she would marry him."

Speedy Milk Delivery
Wadena, Minn.—When Mrs. broke out in the kitchen of Hattie Stuewer's farm home, she rushed to the barn and found a ready-made bucket line. Other members of the family were waiting. They dashed to the barn with their pails and extinguished the blaze—with fresh milk.

Politeness Pays
Rockford, Ill.—Traffic policeman Howard Brewer has found that courtesy pays.

Several months ago, with courtesy politeness and a big smile, Brewer reprimanded a motorist for traveling too fast.

Recently he received a shipment of 500 tulip bulbs from the motorist—K. Klyn, of Sessanheim, Holland.

TENACIOUS LIBERTY

There is too much loose talk about the war. People who shake their heads and say they hope we can keep out of it, but fear we'll go in, are talking loosely. So long as we are determined not to make war on anybody outside of our own borders—and all polls indicate that this attitude predominates in the United States today—nothing will push us into the conflict.

The often-heard assertion that if we are "dragged into the European war" we'll lose forever all our freedom and emerge from the war "only another dictatorship" is another bit of loose talk. This country would concentrate all its energies and materials on the successful conduct of any war it got into, but it would not necessarily throw the Declaration of Independence, the Bill of Rights and the Emancipation Proclamation into the discard even for that job. Certainly the American people would refuse to let them go permanently.

Proof that truly democratic peoples do not easily, or for long, surrender their liberty is found in the reaction against war censorship and other controls in England as the second month of the war begins. The press there is already winning back its right to obtain and give out news. Plenty of criticism of specific governmental acts is expressed in Parliament, in the press and by citizens for whom no concentration camps are prepared in that normally free land.

U. S. OF EUROPE

Thomas Mann, the famous German author, now an American, says the only answer to Old World problems is for Europe to follow the American example. If it doesn't it will die.

And what is "the American example?" Morally it is tolerance. Politically it is organized cooperation.

Here in America we have all the races represented in Europe, and also most of the European problems, except for the crowdedness and lack of material resources over there. The human problem, the problem of people of different race, language, religion and politics getting along amicably together, is the same.

It would be easier, though, to accomplish such a miracle in Europe if the races over there were mixed up more thoroughly, as they are here. Individuals of varied races can usually get along together. The more they are bunched and segregated, the harder it is.

WORKLESS YOUTH

It is said that most American boys today grow up without working. That is, without experience of hard or systematic work. This is probably true generally of boys not brought up on farms, and represents a great change from the old American tradition.

It is a very unfortunate situation, says Dr. Luther Gulick, addressing a congress of parents and teachers. Industrial development and business life produce homes "without an understanding of work as a career and without an appreciation of the value of money." Children who have never done any hard or systematic work or earned any money in their formative years have missed something vital in their education.

He suggests that parents compensate for this lack in the home by establishing a regular routine of chores, and by showing appreciation of craftsmanship in anything the children may do.

Summer vacations provide opportunities for remedying this lack, he says. And where young employees have had no "work experience" an understanding employer can help to bridge the gap.

WAR FEELING

A current sampling of public opinion in this country shows that 95 per cent of our people are opposed to our going to war.

The question was, "Should we declare war and send our army and navy abroad to fight Germany?" So expressed, perhaps we should be surprised that even one American out of 20 is rarin' to fight.

How sentiment will go as the war proceeds is another question. There are so many factors to influence emotion and judgment. If Hitler plunges ahead ruthlessly after the Allies' rejection of his dubious peace proposals, if there are shocking depredations by land and sea, if neutrals are killed and American interests greatly damaged, and if the democracies began to weaken as they did in 1917, a new poll may show a very different result.

Meanwhile we stand pat in our isolation, strengthen our defenses and hope for the best.

Cheer up. The stars are closer than we've supposed. An astronomer assures us that the nearest star, Alf Centauri (usually referred to as Alpha Centauri) is only 12,000,000,000,000 miles away instead of 25,000,000,000,000.

A Moscow paper says war against Hitler is "folly." Everybody should just let him have as much of the earth as Stalin doesn't want.

That isn't war over there; it's a poker game.

ALLERGY TO FOODS

When the hay fever season arrives we may congratulate ourselves because we are not allergic or sensitive to ragweed pollen with the distressing symptoms of running eyes, and stuffed and sometimes running nose. Also with the arrival of the strawberry season, it is nice to be able to eat this luscious fruit without having to undergo an attack of hives or an upset stomach or intestine. We may also be able to eat various kinds of fish that disturb many others.

If pollen of plants, strawberries or other fruits, and fish do not bother us, we may believe that we are not sensitive or allergic to any food or other substance.

As a matter of fact, being allergic to "some" food or substance is really the rule in life rather than the exception. It is because we think of only a few substances as causing allergic symptoms that the majority of us do not realize that we are allergic individuals after all.

Dr. W. C. Service, Colorado Springs, Colo., in the Journal of the American Medical Association, states that his survey shows that major or severe allergy affects one-fifth of the general population, and if minor or mild allergy is counted, it is evident that at least three-fourths of the population are affected by allergy to a greater or less extent.

Dr. Service found that of the 3,141 persons interviewed, 316 had hay fever. This means more than 10 per cent of the population has hay fever. The ages varied from 1 to 65 years. The figures show that hay fever tends to show itself in childhood, almost 60 per cent of the patients having acquired it before the age of 20.

Asthma was present in 114 persons, about 7 in every 200 of the population.

Migraine, one-sided headache, was found in 116 persons, about 7 in every 200.

Hives and hive-like eruptions were found in about 3 in every 100 of the population. Almost half these patients with attacks of hives had acquired the condition during the first ten years of life. Food was listed as the principal cause in every case.

Without exception, food was given as the cause of stomach and intestinal allergy—diarrhoea, discomfort in abdomen, and constipation. There were three cases in every 100 of the population.

That heredity is a factor in causing allergy was definitely shown as nearly 36 per cent of sufferers had one or both parents affected. A survey of 2,439 persons who were not allergic showed only about 9 per cent had "allergic" ancestors.

Allergy or sensitiveness to various foods and other substances is the subject dealt with in Dr. Barton's booklet entitled (No. 106) Allergy. It may be obtained by sending ten cents to The Bell Library, 247 West 43rd Street, New York, N. Y., mentioning the Kingston Daily Freeman.

New Cars Bigger 'n' Better And The Prices Are Lower

With the New York Auto Show opening October 15, and other exhibits scheduled throughout the country, you'll be hearing a lot about the new cars. Here's a quick look at them.

AP Feature Service

Detroit—If you really don't want to buy a 1940 model automobile it would be well to keep away from the automobile shows or the retail salesrooms—because the motorcar industry this year has turned out some of the finest looking cars in its history.

Sleek isn't the word for them. They all look bigger and more massive than ever; even the low-priced units look like the $2,000 car of a few years back.

Gone almost entirely is the "shark nosed" appearance of last year. The chrome-plated grilles are retained; many of them have been lowered, but the hood has been straightened up. Most of the new models have the alligator type of hood cover.

Carrying batteries under the hood cover, most of the new units have a locked-down cover which can be released only by operating a lever at the side of the instrument panel. Finger-tip gear shifting immediately under the steering wheel is virtually universal.

There are few mechanical departures in the coming year's models, most of the designers' efforts having been to make the vehicles roomier and more attractive to the eye. The new "sealed beam" lights will be found on practically every 1940 model; more accessories have been made "standard."

The most drastic mechanical change in the coming models is Oldsmobile's automatic gear shift, eliminating both the standard type of clutch and the clutch pedal. This feature, however, is to be optional equipment, at a small additional cost.

All units are priced lower than comparable types of last year. Where prices have not actually been cut, additional equipment has been made standard. The price reductions have been made on the expectation of increased sales. Leading observers of the industry are looking for the production and distribution of approximately 4,000,000 units in the 1940 model season.

Approximately 85 per cent of these will be accounted for by the low priced group headed by Chevrolet, Ford and Plymouth in that order. Ford has added a front end stabilizer to his models. Chevrolet has developed a "completely new car" which looks more over like some of its older brothers in the General Motors line. Plymouth not only has added an entirely new model, but also has provided wider bodies and greater luggage space.

Village Notes

Highland, Oct. 13—Edward H. Starr arrived in New York Monday on the Boschdyk of the Hamburg American Line sailing from Rotterdam. He left Thursday for his home in San Antonio, Texas, after a couple days spent with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Starr. He went across in August on a business trip but was only able to accomplish about half of what he expected to do and visited only in Holland and Belgium. The trip here encountered two days of storm but otherwise was uneventful.

Extinct Dodo

The dodo was a clumsy, defenseless bird, about the size of a swan, found living on Mauritius when the island was discovered by the Portuguese near the beginning of the sixteenth century. Its wings were small and incapable of flight. Unable to cope with conditions, this helpless bird was exterminated about 1651 and no entire specimens are preserved.

Origin of Pekingese

The origin of the Pekingese dog is lost in antiquity, but it is known that these dogs were regarded as sacred and kept closely guarded in the palaces of Chinese rulers for many centuries. In 1850, at the time of the looting of the summer palace in Peking, five of the dogs were seized and carried to England, where they became the progenitors of the Pekingese of today.

Republican Candidates

PAUL A. ZUCCA

Alderman Paul A. Zucca of the First Ward, is one of the most active members of the Common Council, and it is for that reason that he has been again chosen by the Republicans of his ward as the candidate to succeed himself in the legislative body of the city.

During the years that Alderman Zucca has been a member of the city council he has taken an active part in all of the important matters that have come up for discussion and action. He has not only worked for the best interest of his own ward, but the city at large.

In addition to his legislative duties Alderman Zucca for years has been with Flanagan's on Wall street, and is known as one of the most expert men in the hat trade in the city. He can tell at a glance of what material a hat is made, and whether it is worth the price asked or not. As one of the alderman's friends said, "You can't fool Paul on a hat."

Alderman Zucca is also active in the civic and fraternal life of the city. Zucca's orchestra under his leadership is one of the outstanding orchestras in the state, and Alderman Zucca is noted for his musical ability. He is not only a first class violin player, but a song leader par excellence. As an active member of the Kiwanis Club he has served that organization as its president and as song leader at its weekly luncheons for years.

At many of the most important social functions and banquets his attendance as song leader and musical director is sufficient insurance of the success of the affair.

This, of course, is only a very brief sketch of the varied activities of the alderman from the First ward, who is again assured of re-election this fall.

Vincent Ewell, 9, of Batavia, his legs and arms crippled by infantile paralysis, says he'll have to get well now because the President of the United States wants him to. Vincent, stricken with the disease and confined to Batavia Hospital for two weeks, is now at the home of his grandparents in Wyoming, N. Y., where he received a cheering letter from President Roosevelt, himself an infantile paralysis victim. The boy's father, a bus driver, died early in September from the disease.

American Representation to Russia Means Much to Smaller Countries of Europe, Particularly Finland
 By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, Oct. 14—The friendly interposition by the United States government of a plea to Russia for the preservation of peaceful relations between the Soviets and Finland is in accord with many a precedent in which similar representations have been made in international crises. But the purpose and significance of the move from a sentimental standpoint transcends its formal nature or its carefully chosen words.

America unquestionably has a deep sympathy for the republic of Finland, as it has for democracies everywhere, but the mere articulation of such a sympathy means a great deal to a small country in a moment of crisis. Clearly the Finnish government cannot and does not expect any material support from the United States, but if it should become engaged in war, the Johnson act forbidding private or treasury loans to governments which have defaulted on their war debts would not apply, because Finland has met her payment on war debt punctually ever since the funding agreement was consummated.

The moral support of the United States is important to Finland, and there are evidences that the American minister to Moscow, Laurence Steinhardt, not only conveyed a formal message, but undoubtedly supplemented it with his own expressions of concern as to the future independence of Finland.

Here in the national capital, the friendliest feeling for Finland has been noted for years, but within the last 24 hours, a manifestation of sympathy occurred which is well worth recording. The Finnish minister to the United States was present at a luncheon at the National Press Club given in honor of H. R. Baughage, the N. B. C. radio commentator, who just returned from Germany and France. The room was jammed, the crowd being even larger than that which attended the speech of Anthony Eden in the same room a few months ago. It was planned merely to introduce guests at the head table, and no announcement was made that the Finnish minister would be present. When he was called upon, he was given an ovation. The newspapermen and their guests rose to their feet and applauded and cheered. It was one of the most remarkable demonstrations in the Press Club within the memory of members. The Finnish minister, spoke off the record for a few minutes, expressing his appreciation.

Incidents like this indicate that perhaps American sentiment was very eloquently transmitted by the formal message presented by Minister Steinhardt in Moscow. Had it been any other country, it is possible that in congress might have been heard some murmurs, but Soviet Russia will not in any way be helped in America if she commits an act of aggression against Finland.

The treatment of Finland, moreover, may become far more important in the future than appears on the surface today. The concern manifested by Norway, Sweden and Denmark over the maintenance by Finland of her sovereignty is bound to be reflected in Scandinavian circles in the United States. Should the Baltic countries find themselves drawn somehow into the vortex of war, there are millions of Scandinavians in America who will begin to have a livelier interest in the embargo repeal controversy than has up to now been apparent.

The United States government would move again if the Scandinavian countries found it desirable to approach Russia, once more, and it may well be that, if mediation of differences is possible through the medium of King Gustav of Sweden, the strongest support will be given such a step by American officials.

Meanwhile, no word has come from the German government that it wishes the United States to offer its services as a peacemaker, though Berlin press dispatches continually hint that neutrals should take the initiative and mention America as a neutral of powerful voice.

If Herr Hitler expected President Roosevelt to interfere and force a cessation of hostilities, such an expectation has already proved fruitless. But, if Germany is so anxious for neutral mediation, it still is a mystery why the German foreign office does not communicate that fact to the American embassy in Berlin. Efforts to bring about an armistice would then begin immediately. (Reproduction rights reserved).

Worship of Sun Linked

To Stone Age Farmers

Worship of the sun as a distinct object apparently did not start until the new Stone age, when man had developed a crude agriculture. In the old Stone age all nature was looked upon as "a great human ghost," the spirits of the dead were supposed to enter into natural objects and the trees, animals, rocks and clouds were endowed with human qualities.

With the advent of crops regularly sown and harvested, the one natural object upon which these crops depended was singled out for special reverence, writes a correspondent to the Wisconsin Star. A great wealth of sun symbols is first noted in this period of pre-history. The paintings and carvings of old Stone age men show no designs that can be connected directly with the sun.

Worship of the sun has gone around the earth. It was a prominent part of the religion of ancient Egypt, where at one time it was refined into a monotheistic system which ranks as one of the world's great religions. It was almost universal among American Indian tribes, reaching its greatest refinement among the Incas of Peru, where the rulers were supposed to be directly descended from the sun. The Japanese ruling family traces its mythological descent from the same source.

WHO HE IS

Private Walter P. Steele, Company G, Sixteenth Infantry, has been in the army 26 years and looks like the typical American soldier. Sculptor Walter Russell has chosen him as model for the figure of a soldier in a memorial to John Philip Sousa. Steele is 42, strong, weather beaten, vigorous. He served through the last war, was in action five times, got the Distinguished Service Cross. Unmarried, he says he couldn't support a wife on his pay of $42 a month.

Before my first enlistment was up we were in the war and when it was all over I'd become an army bug—so I stayed. Anyhow I didn't have any trade—all I knew was soldiering.

"Before I go out of the service I certainly hope to get an increase in rank. If I get to be sergeant first class, I'll get a pension of $98.50 a month. Then I'll go to the Philippines. There are a lot of retired army men there, they have their own clubs and everything. I'll feel at home with a lot of old soldiers."

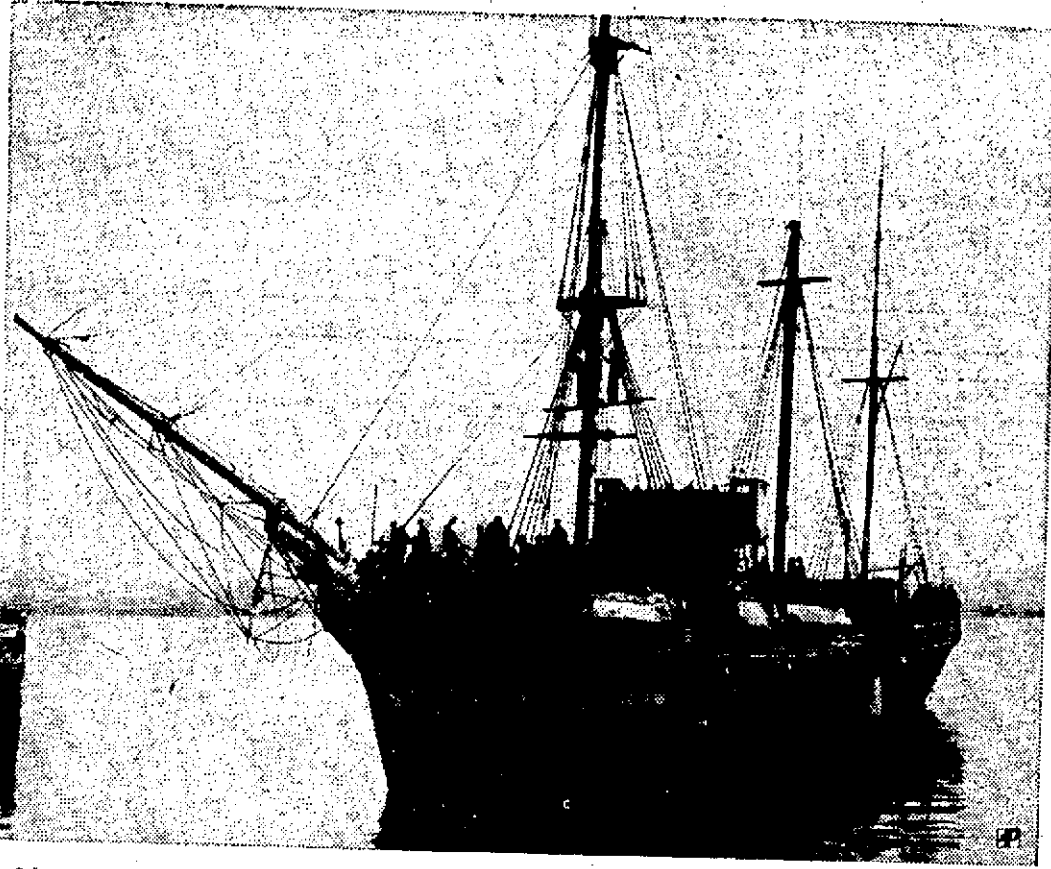

"I've been in the army so long I feel out of place with civilians. Soldiers don't talk about politics and business. We're most interested in girls and food and liquor. Why in 1931 I went to visit my brother and his family out in Denver and I couldn't stick it out a month."

"Well, you know, for one thing, civilians don't eat like people in the army—we're big eaters. Now if we have ham and eggs and you want to eat a dozen eggs—well get ahead and eat 'em. Same with chicken—if you like it, you can eat a whole one at one meal. Why the mess sergeant—he's one of the most important men in the army. God almighty, he's always got a surprise for you!"

68 AND GOING STRONG—Just out of drydock and pronounced in good condition, the 68-year-old barkentine Bear of Oakland is shown at the Boston navy yard where a new 600-horsepower engine was installed. READY FOR HELL'S KITCHEN ROSE BOWL—That swivel-hip technique used in the larger football camps is good enough for these gridders in New York's Hell's Kitchen, that west side section fringing on the Hudson river docks. These are "Panthers" warming up for their football game with the "Franksteins." Each boy had his own idea about a uniform.

NAZIS POINT WITH PRIDE TO 'ADMIRAL SCHEER'—Reportedly the successful vessel which sank a British freighter, Clement, off Brazil, above 10,000-ton Admiral Scheer is one of three pocket battleships in Germany's navy; others are the Deutschland and the Admiral Graf Spee. These ships carry heavy armament consisting of six 11-inch guns, eight 6-inch guns, six large and three small anti-aircraft guns, and eight torpedo tubes. They also carry two seaplanes with catapults for launching. Clement survivors reaching Bahia, Brazil, reportedly identified the Admiral Scheer as Nazi boat which sank their freighter.

CHAPTER SEVEN
Feminine Curiosity

"I thought I left nothing in the house," said Mrs. Murchison. "Just this book," Tuck said. "I didn't think the book was important—perhaps it had belonged to your maid. But it had in it a lovely carved ivory bridge pencil for a marker, and I thought you might not like to lose it."

There was a tinge of hot color at the base of Mrs. Murchison's throat as she took "The Bartered Bride" from Tuck's hands. "Thank you for the pencil," she said. "My maid, yes."

"And this pipe," Tuck went on. "If your husband is as devoted to his old pipe as mine is," she stopped.

Mrs. Murchison had dropped the book. Both hands were at her heart. She was staring at the pipe in Tuck's hand with some terrible surmise in her face.

"The pipe—he has had it studying in Germany—"

"Then I'm glad I found it," Tuck said equably.

The woman looked up. "Where have you found it?" she said tensely. "It is never out of his hand."

"I found it in the little drawer just under the leaf for the typewriter—in the desk in the study," Mrs. Murchison, Tuck replied. "I am sorry if your husband has been searching for it."

She still held the pipe out but the woman did not touch it. Tuck glanced at her sharply.

The woman caught the glance. She moistened her dry lips and straightened her shoulders.

"Thank you for it, then," she said more composedly, took it from Tuck's outstretched hand and stepped back. Tuck took the hint, said goodby and ran down the steps.

Now, what's that all about?" she said to herself. The woman's attitude was certainly strange.

That afternoon, when Bunny came out from a holiday relieving at the office, she had something more to add to the picture.

Tuck, almost bursting to tell her of the events of the morning, had gone to the University to meet her and as they walked back through the dim green woodland path had told her of the affair of the pipe.

"She had a terribly frightened look, Bunny—surprised and frightened. Now why? Why should the sight of an old pipe your husband had left behind, even if he had had it ever since he was a student in Germany—why should that upset a woman so?"

"I don't think it was the pipe that upset her," Bunny said slowly. "I think it was the fact of your having it."

"What do you mean, Bunny?"

"Why—I thought I'd do a little sleuthing too. So I telephoned the University and asked for Dr. Murchison—"

"—she broke off suddenly, and looked at Tuck. "You remember, Tuck, that Higgins was quite willing to tell where Mrs. Murchison was, and where the brother was, but when it came to Mrs. Murchison himself he wiggled and squirmed."

"Yes—and Michael, right after he had finished saying that he didn't know a thing about the Murchisons, asked where Dr. Murchison was! How did he know Murchison was a doctor? That's what made me suspect Michael! Bunny—that's right. He's the man the mystery's about."

"What idea too?"

"What did they say at the University?"

"Said he was off on a business trip and they didn't have his address. So I phoned his wife."

"Bunny—go on!"

"Well—Bunny stopped, pulled off her hat and lifted her face to the cool evening breeze—"Well—I thought I'd better be a little wary—so I said I was the Customs Office and had a box of books for Dr. Murchison and that there was duty on them."

"Go on, Bunny—you're exasperating."

"Yes, dear. And I asked for Dr. Murchison's address to notify him."

"And what did she say?"

"Well, she waited a little while before she answered me, and then she said she'd tell me herself."

"Oh, I think I'm disappointed. I thought maybe—I didn't know."

"Me too," Bunny agreed. "But wait a minute. I said 'How can you let us know? Because if he doesn't clear them in a week we've got to send them back.'"

"Yes."

"And she said, very slowly—'Send them back then. I cannot get an answer in a week.'"

Nocturnal Frowning

That night, failing of sleep, Tuck dreamed of walking past a gigantic rock-crusher, when suddenly across her feet, when she struggled to dislodge it, the awake, to find Agamemnon purring happily and digging his claws into the elderdown over her knees. She reached down, slapped his paws, patted his head and com-

FASHIONS and HOUSEHOLD HINTS FOR WOMEN

You'll Need A Thinking Cap To Choose Your Winter Hat

By ADELAIDE KERR
AP Feature Writer

You will have to have hats on your mind as well as your head, if you want to be smart this year. The new ones have substance—something you haven't handled in chapeaux in years. That's partly rebellion against the shadowy affairs you used to perch over your nose, partly balance for the new accent on hips in this winter's profile.

Choosing the right hat from the 1940 edition requires knowledge and consideration of lines—your own, your frock's and your hat's. You'll have to look twice—and think thrice—to get the right one for all three.

Here are some headlines in fur, felt and feathers which should help to set your thinking cap to work.

FUR IS VERY IMPORTANT this year. Mink and beaver make cuff pillboxes to wear with town coats of those furs, or with suits trimmed with them. Leopard covers a toque worn with a leopard-trimmed suit and the handle of the umbrella carried with it. Persian lamb makes a funnel crown for a green felt chapeau worn with a black coat. Silver fox fashions a toque to match a muff that is going places with cocktail and dinner frocks and rims the hood of a silver fox evening wrap. Even mink tails are used, dangling tassels-fashion from the side of felt toques. Furry melusine, which the fashion world calls beaver, makes smart hats, too. The vogue for fur is reflected in this mink cuff pillbox perched on a snood of plaited black felt strips. Howard Hodge designed it to wear with a mink coat and a black frock.

FELT IS ANOTHER FAVOR-ED MEDIUM for achieving the new 1940 look. It makes scores of town hats with brims, which get much applause from husbands. Postillions—smart as a whip this year and shown in great variety: straight-brimmed, Spanish hats, sometimes edged with a "surtain veil," and dip-brimmed hats with funnel crowns are among them. (Toques are in the felt field, too.) It's smart to wear them in color or in one of the new grayed hues—sage green or red with black clothes, topaz or stone blue with brown. Most 1940 chapeaux cover the back of the head either by the hat itself, by a feather trim or by a snood. The snoods vary from open veiling effects to draped designs of fabric. A heaving veiling one backs this black felt postillion by Howard Hodge. It is trimmed with a buckle wrapped in gold kid.

FEATHERS DO SOME BRIGHT WORK on winter hats. Turquoise wings front a taupe felt; coque feathers trail from the back of a postillion, and red and green parrot wings spear a fur-crowned green felt. Ostrich frivols about on a number of chapeaux and bonnets designed for cocktail and dinner wear. Other bonnets designed to go to cocktails and dinner are made entirely of velvet—turquoise perhaps—and tied demurely under the chin in a manner recalling the Eighties. Toques are another important feature of the afternoon mode. Many are designed of velvet or felt, draped to fit the head like a skullcap, and topped with a great twist of the material. Final contribution to the variety in 1940 hats comes in chapeaux that reflect a military trend. A blue ostrich plume fronts this one in a manner recalling a cadet's cap.

THIS FELT TOQUE, fitting close as a skullcap, has a great top twist of felt.

A FLOWER-STUDED SNOOD finishes a wine-purple felt hat by Sally Victor.

THIS SNOODED TURBAN of red and green jersey is designed by Walter Florell.

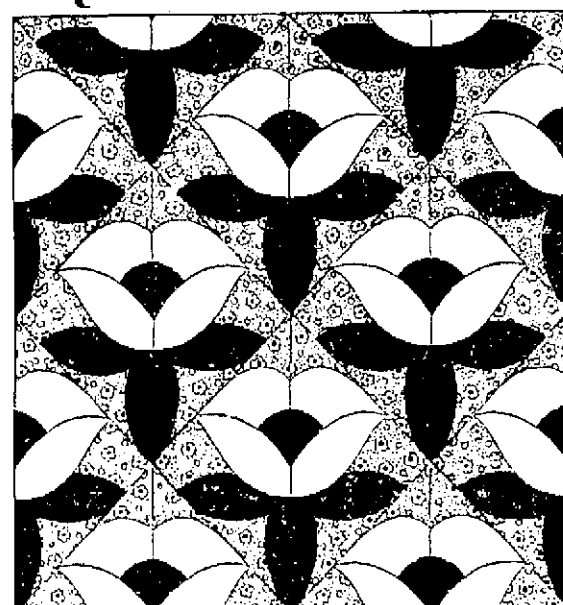

Your Screen Test

1. Johnny Russell, six-year-old blond curly-head, plays Shirley Temple's young brother in the forthcoming "The Blue Bird." In what respect is this screen relationship unique?
2. In what movies were the following well-known last lines: (a) "The blankety-blank stole my watch"; (b) "Hey, Flagg, wait for baby?"
3. Identify the following film starlet (shown in the picture): Her first name is Lucille; she is making her screen debut in "The Roaring Twenties"; her uncle is one of the famous screen players of all time and one of his best remembered pictures is "The Mark of Zorro."
4. (a) What pioneer of the film industry died recently, and (b) of what studio was he, for many years, president?
5. (a) What sensational baby star of several years ago (his last picture was "It's A Great Life" in 1936) is being groomed for a comeback at the present age of seven years? (b) What four-year-old starlet recently had her first picture premiered especially for her in her home town of Wheeling, W. Va.?

Count 20 points for each question correctly answered. A score of 60 is good, 80 is excellent, and 90 or above is colossal.

—About Pouring Wine

That red wine should be kept flowing until it rises to where the outline of the glass begins to curve back—about half full.

Red wines, says Pierre Laffitte, head of the wine cellars for a big New York importing house, should be served in eight or ten-ounce, tulip-shaped glasses.

The object in not filling a wine glass to the brim is to leave space for the bouquet to accumulate; the curve of the glass helps concentrate it.

Sherry glasses may be filled as much as three-quarters full. Some people prefer vee-shaped glasses for sherry, but if you don't want to buy special glasses you may use a three or four-ounce tulip-shaped glass similar to the one in which you serve your red wines.

Dry sherrys may be chilled when served instead of cocktails. Sweet white wines should be chilled; The sweeter the wine, the more you should chill it.

Brandies and Hqueurs may be served in two-ounce liqueur glasses. The usual quantity of brandy to a serving is one and a half ounces. If you serve your brandy in inhalers, pour the glass about a quarter full. The average brandy "inhaler" size is about 9 ounces.

Cues on Curls for Girls Who Want to Have Ruly Waves

By BETTY CLARKE
AP Feature Service Writer

There's no logical reason for women to take pot-luck in permanents. Permanent waving has been developed so that any reasonably good operator can't go wrong on it, says Agnella Taylor, who's been in the business almost since the first permanents were given—back in 1914.

Miss Taylor says this about permanents:

Three kinds are given today—spiral, croquinoile and machineless.

Spiral permanents—and only about five per cent of the permanents now given, says Miss Taylor, are spiral—involve "blocking" the hair in squares and winding from the scalp out.

Croquinoile waves involve blocking the hair in oblong sections (about twice as much hair may be included in a croquinoile as in a spiral) and winding from the ends of the hair toward the scalp.

The machineless wave depends on the reaction of water to the solution in pads applied to the hair.

For the woman who is about to get a permanent Miss Taylor says:

Start about three weeks ahead of time with frequent brushing. Do not wash your hair just before you go to the beauty shop.

Oil treatments are good, particularly if your hair is dry. Good olive oil is excellent, so are good grades of mineral oil.

Insist on "test curls"; not just one, but three or four. Ask the operator to take them about an inch from the hair line at the nape of the neck. One or two are bound to be relatively poor—

Soft curls and waves that are easy to manage are the result of a good permanent.

since you're testing to find out the best steaming time—and you want that hair to be where it's least apt to show up.

You can judge a test curl by wetting the hair and pulling it down to see how strong it is. You also should be able to push it into soft waves without much trouble. A good shop will keep a record of your permanent available for the next time you want one.

Linda Darnell, At 15, Achieves Film Stardom In A Woman's Role

Women in The News

Welcome Home...

These three young women, and their folks, had good reason to smile. The girls were passengers on the torpedoed liner Athenia; these pictures were taken when they finally reached New York on their journey home.

LINDA DARNELL: "I know I'm awfully lucky."

By ROBBIN COONS
AP Feature Service Writer

Hollywood—in case Linda Darnell, in the crush of excitement and confusion, has overlooked the fact, here's a reminder: Linda, you're 16 years old Monday, October 16. Linda has been 20th Century-Fox's "problem child"—but the kind of problem a studio is glad to tackle.

She's a beauty. Anybody who saw "Hotel for Women," her first picture and her first starring role, knows that. But here was the catch. For all her beauty, her poise, her appearance of maturity, Linda came to Hollywood (from Dallas, Texas) as a child of 15. She hadn't faced a camera before, except for a screen test on her first trip when she was dismissed as "too young."

Gets Romantic Lead
At 15 she didn't look "too young" but rather like a good bet for stardom. And she handed her the leading role—romantic—opposite James Ellison. She photographed beautifully, and her acting was unusual considering it was a first flight. But she was still 15, and Hollywood can't have 15-year-old leading ladies.

A girl of fifteen in the movies either acts her age or cheats on it one way or another. She wears short dresses and pretends to be 12 or she wears long dresses and pretends to be sophisticated. But there was Linda—and her status as a leading lady was a fait accompli. "She had to be older. She had to be at least 17, as the studio first insisted she was, or better, 19, as the studio later decided. Linda is one of six children, and so far the only one that's movie-struck. Her father is a Dallas postal clerk, of Scotch-Irish descent, a veteran of 30 years in the service. Linda always wanted to be an actress. She decided it with mirrors as a child. She worked in school plays, in church plays, in the Civic Theatre and New Theatre League of Dallas.

Walks 'Like a Duck'
The screen doesn't lie about Linda's looks. "Those big eyes are brown, like her hair, and the teeth are straight and white, the figure is her own. It does lie, however, about her sophistication. For Linda talks gravely, quietly, with poise—but once in a while she betrays the 16-year-old. As when she tells about her "walking lesson." She takes one daily, she says, because Gregory Ratoff, her director, "says I walk like a duck."

Since Linda arrived in April, things have happened so quickly and furiously that she hasn't had time to realize what her new stardom means—"except that I know I'm awfully lucky."

She's playing now opposite Tyne Power, who is one of her two favorite actors—the other is Don Ameche—in "Daytime Wife."

Mrs. Johanna Rapp, Frewsburg, celebrating her 100th birthday anniversary, was recently greeted by her 70-year-old son, Frank, of Buffalo, only survivor of her four children.

Mother—Junior, every time you are naughty I get another gray hair.
Junior—Then you must have been a terror when you were little, just look at grandpa.

Buffet Ideas

For the buffet table, try this—stuff hollowed beets, carrots or hard-cooked egg cases with cheese, ham or pickle relish sandwich fillings.

Use To the Utmost

If your vacuum cleaner has several attachments, make the best use of them. They come in handy for cleaning behind radiators, book cases and the refrigerator.

Fingermarks

To remove finger marks from washable wallpaper, rub gently with a soft cloth dipped in warm water. Wipe off quickly and then dry with a clean soft cloth.

Milk Shakes at Home

For a summer touch, mold frozen salads or desserts in halved orange skins.

A fruit jar, tightly capped, can be used effectively for mixing fruit or milk shakes.

Good Taste Today

Wedding Refreshments

Dear Mrs. Post: You have said that at a simple wedding very light refreshments are sufficient. Six-thirty in the evening is the time I have chosen for my wedding to take place. Will it be all right to limit the refreshments to punch and wedding cake, ice cream and vanilla wafers at the reception immediately following?

Answer: No, this menu is not substantial enough for dinner (or supper). It will, however, be quite all right if you change the time for the wedding for a between-meal hour in the afternoon, or also to a later one well past every one's evening meal.

Pottluck Panic

Dear Mrs. Post: I cannot understand women—they get upset at the most unexpected times. The other night I brought a man from out-of-town to my home for dinner, and my wife was furious. I explained to her that I didn't have time to call her first, and that I had told him plainly he would have to take pottluck! This man's good will is very important to me, and when I found he was free for the evening, it was just natural for me to ask him home to dinner, and just take him along rather than telephoning in his hearing, seemed better to me. We didn't happen to have as good a dinner as sometimes, and this made my wife angry because she is a wonderful cook and likes to show it off. I like to have her to do this too. But I hold that my wife should know how to run her kitchen so as to have enough on hand for one more. Don't you agree?

Answer: I see what you mean about not wanting to telephone in the man's hearing, but I also think it was unfair not to give your wife any warning. For all you know, there might be just enough food in the house for you and her. Two chops, two baked potatoes, for example, and two little pots of custard—things that could not in any way be stretched. Half an hour's notice could make all the difference! It might give her time to get something from the market or at least to look over her store of provisions and contrive a menu. And then, too, as a business man it ought not to be necessary to tell you that if you expect your wife to always have enough provisions in the refrigerator for an unexpected guest—an important guest whom you want to feed well—you will have to allow liberally for food bills.

To be always ready for company is very extravagant. Did you forget—or don't you care about that angle?

Good Hosts Provide Cigarettes

Dear Mrs. Post: Neither my husband nor I smoke, but do you think we should keep cigarettes in the house for others to smoke when they come to see us?

Answer: If all of your friends smoke, then I think you should, of course. On the other hand, those who really care very much about smoking usually like only one brand, and therefore carry their own, so that proffering them is more often a gesture of hospitality than a supply of demand.

Know What Is Correct When Dining in Public

What is correct on this occasion? Should a girl who is dining with a friend invite a passing acquaintance to sit down for a chat?

Etiquette says NO, but her escort may do so if he cares to. In our picture he is rising to shake hands, as is correct when gentlemen are introduced. It's up to the other man to make his visit brief.

When a woman stops at a table, even briefly, it is correct for her to rise and stand until she leaves or is seated. What if you drop a piece of silver? Correct to leave it for the waiter to pick up. Or if he isn't near, say when he returns: "Will you please give me another fork?"

Does a woman ever order when dining with a man? Should she choose the cheapest dish? These and many other points of table etiquette are explained in our 32-page booklet. Tells what's correct for formal, informal dining; how to eat tricky foods.

Herzog's Guidepost To better living

SOMETIMES there is talk of "doing over the house," backed by a serious desire that furnishings and decoration be pulled together and made to reflect more personality and taste. But nothing happens. It's just talk.

Yet it isn't difficult to give the home its maximum charm. Often it costs so very little. Sometimes it doesn't cost anything! Rooms have personality when arranged harmoniously to reflect the individualities of those who live in them. Only things and colors that we like, and that are like us, reflect our personalities.

Some people are afraid of their own taste, and that's a pity. Of course taste is shown by what we accumulate, and the way we arrange it, but taste is also something that we learn as we go along.

—But to get back to enhancing the home. If you don't know just where to start tackling the job, call Ann Herzog. She's in her office every day, as Herzog's decorating consultant, glad to be of assistance whether you phone to ask for color suggestions, or wish her to come out to your home and help plan general redecorating.

We've not mentioned it before because we supposed you understood — there's no charge. This is a new service, and we want you to use it.

Indifferent walls! Paint-worn floors! Drab chairs! They let you down. But colors, whether in the decorative new wall papers, or in strong paints, are perpetually stimulating. For you vigorous personalities who like the latter, let us say that strong colors are pure and deep, with a vital, living quality. It is such colors that doctors use in sanitariums and children's wards because of their psychological tonic effect.

Speaking of colors, here are typical scraps of telephone conversation overheard in Ann Herzog's office:

For your bedroom (says Ann Herzog), why not Sunshine yellow walls and French grey woodwork? And don't forget to paint the inside of your closet. You don't want to open the closet door and find a dark hole. Make the closet interior Nile green to contrast with your yellow walls and see what a psychic lift you'll get every time you open it.

"Or, if you should decide to use Nile green walls with oyster white woodwork, then do the closet in a light maroon."

"So you can't think what to do with the other room? Why not start with the floor? Give it a background coat of paint, then 'spatter' it in traditional New England style. After the colored spatters are there, and a few throw rugs, it will be easy to carry out a color scheme."

It's nice to order a roomful of Swedish modern, or whatever is in vogue. But will it reflect your personality? Perhaps you can take the best of your old, add some of the new pieces you've a yen for, and get a harmonious whole that will be charming because it reflects the inimitable you.

It depends on what your old pieces are. If they are ornate Victorian or Chippendale, they won't go with modern; but perhaps you've a late Empire chair. It will have enough simplicity not only to harmonize with modern, but to give the added interest of contrast.

So often the old and the new go charmingly together. Since writing last week about the "mongrel" house, its owner took the Empire period vase she had never known what to do with, and had it made into a lamp. Because of its simple lines it combines interestingly with modern things. There! Didn't we tell you it's fun to take stock of what you've got, and see what new effects you can get?

Sometimes the portraits and landscapes painted by our early American ancestors (and now called American folk art and much sought after by art museums), as well as old samplers, when framed simply, blend perfectly with modern furnishings — all because the modern art and design movement went back to the primitive for its inspiration. So bring out the samplers!

Well, we've chatted at random today, just to suggest possibilities for refurbishing the home at little or no cost. Let's go to it. If you run into any problems, phone or visit Ann Herzog.

Yellow Jackets, Hudson Meet Tomorrow Afternoon At Municipal Stadium

HOME RUN SCORES BIG HIT

After slapping on three homers in the World's Series, Yankee rookie slugger, Charley Keller, lit out on another home run to Frederick, Md., where he joined his wife and their young son, two-month-old Charley III. Slugger Charley is shown taking over new home duties, as Mrs. Keller watches.

One of the hottest local football battles will be witnessed tomorrow afternoon on the municipal stadium gridiron when two long and bitter rivals, the Yellow Jackets and the Hudson A. C., meet at 3:15 o'clock. Those who plan to attend the game are asked to note that the contest is scheduled to start promptly at the above time. The city baseball league playoffs are scheduled to be played at 2 o'clock at the Athletic Field so that sports fans may see the greater part of both games.

The Hudson eleven, who expect to make a break in the Jackets' winning streak, will bring a large crowd of rooters. This year's tussle will have a little more color than previously due to the transfer of Joe Broskie and Charlie Kozanowke from the Hudson team to the Yellow Jackets at the start of the season. For many years Kozanowke was the key man for the upstate team and Broskie made a name for himself for his line work.

Despite Hudson's loss of these two men, adequate replacements have been found and a hard and close battle should be seen tomorrow.

According to Coach Don Beany, the Jackets are in fine shape and seem to have found their stride against the Walden Tigers in Wednesday night's floodlight attraction. For the first time this season the boys seemed to click on the offense and close up tight on the defense. The stone-wall defense kept the Tigers from penetrating inside the locals 20 yard line.

Hudson will bring a squad of 17 men to town, headed by such old timers as Shupa, Banks, Cardinale, and the Mahotas. "Kozz" Kozanowke's brother will be in the lineup.

The Hudson roster includes: M. Paruchuck, 33; Mohota, 44; Rossi, 80; Shetsky, 13; Cardinale, 12; K. Paruchuck, 22; Banks, 9; Myers, 11; Hanyan, 30; W. Mohota, 15; Kozanowke, 11; Shupa, 77; Mooney, 5; Peloubet, 10; Podowicz, 55, and Cavetta, 66.

Section of Broome County Opened for Hunters This Year

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 14 (AP)—New York state hunters will be free to use at least 85,000 acres of the 129,000 of posted land in Broome county this fall.

State Conservation Commissioner Lighthow Osborne said owners of the land agreed to permit hunters its use as a part of a land-owner-sportsman program effected through the department. Hunters have been asked to avoid shooting in close proximity to persons, live stock or buildings; refrain from property damage; keep dogs away from live stock and hunt in small parties.

Pan-Am Olympics May Be Held in '40

Buenos Aires, Oct. 14 (AP)—The Argentine Olympic committee is contemplating the possibility of organizing a Pan-American Athletic meet at Buenos Aires in 1940 in the event the European war makes it necessary to call off the Olympic games in Helsinki.

Invitations already have been sent to 20 American countries. It was disclosed today. The plan was said to be contingent upon a reasonable number of acceptances.

While no program for financing the proposed games has been evolved, the committee is considering construction of facilities at San Isidro, about 15 miles north of Buenos Aires.

Quigley Returned To Accident Scene For First '39 Game

Topeka, Kas., Oct. 14 (AP)—E. C. Quigley, veteran National League umpire and football and basketball official, returned to the same gridiron on which he was injured a year ago for his first 1939 assignment. He umpired last night's Washburn-College game. An ankle injury last fall put him on crutches several months.

Hold That Line! (Hold Anything!)

It was a bitterly played, thrilling football game that the Frankensteins and the Panthers put on the other day in New York City's Hell Kitchen section. Here's an example of how the Frankensteins' powerful defense stalled the fierce Panthers in the playground contest. Exceptionally fierce was the "blocking," as illustrated by the headgear-wearing youngster at the left. Big Vincent (Butch) Marino (wearing the sweater) was a "standout" at backing up the line. The official score was not announced.

Several Big Duels On the National Football Schedule

New York, Oct. 14 (AP)—Taking them strictly on the basis of the crowds they are expected to attract, Ohio State-Northwestern, Southern California-Illinois, Pittsburgh-Duke and Tulane-Fordham are today's biggest college football battles.

With two intersectional "naturals" and a battle between two of the highest-rated teams in the powerful Big Ten conference, it's likely that at least three of these contests will live up to the advance billings. Illinois hardly seems a match for Southern California, leading candidate for Pacific coast conference honors and the Rose Bowl.

But every section can offer serious competition for interest, especially in the Big Ten, generally rated as the nation's No. 1 football group. While Northwestern's wildcats, upset by Oklahoma last week, are trying to redeem themselves against the mighty Buckeyes, Minnesota, another upset victim, clashes with Purdue; Michigan tests its strength against a surprisingly good Iowa team and Indiana faces Wisconsin. And to keep the conference from having a monopoly of big midwestern games, Notre Dame takes on Southern Methodist in a game that is expected to draw 45,000 fans.

Biggest Battles
The south, which has been in the spotlight all season because of its intersection triumphs, brings its biggest battles down where the home folks can see this week. In addition to Fordham's effort to make up for the Alabama defeat against Tulane, considered slightly stronger, the crimson tide, North Carolina plays New York University. Georgia tackles Holy Cross and Louisiana State faces Rice, from the southwest conference.

Other major intersectional clashes on the national program include Harvard-Chicago, Carnegie Tech-Case, Texas Christian-Temple, Detroit-Catholic, Richmond-Rutgers, Colorado-Kansas State, Kansas-Colorado State and Villanova-Texas A. and M. For the stay-at-homes, outstanding attractions are Navy-Dartmouth, Yale-Pennsylvania, Princeton-Cornell and Columbia-Army in the east's unofficial "Ivy League," as well as Syracuse-Georgetown and Colgate-Brown. The Big-Six conference clash between Nebraska and Iowa State, and Marquette-Michigan State and Missouri-Washington University are good "side" attractions in the mid-west.

The south has a number of "breathers" listed for big teams, but there still are the Wake Forest-North Carolina State, Virginia Tech-William and Mary and Furman-Citadel southern conference games, Auburn and Mississippi State in the southeastern conference, and Vanderbilt-V.M.I., Maryland-Virginia and Mississippi-Centenary on the outside.

Arkansas vs. Baylor
Arkansas and Baylor meet in the only southwest conference clash while Texas tackles Oklahoma from the Big Six and Texas Tech, a major "independent," eases off against Arizona Teachers of Flagstaff. Utah, leading light of the Rocky Mountain Big Seven, seeks another victory at Brigham Young's expense.

On the west coast, Oregon conference leader, against California is about the biggest game as U.C.L.A., another title contender, faces Stanford's rather ordinary team and Washington plays Washington State. There was a drop in Friday activity, but South Carolina got in with its first southern conference victory, 7-0 over Davidson, and Denver entered Rocky Mountain Big Seven conference competition with a 32-7 win over Wyoming. Washburn, of the Missouri Valley loop, trimmed Colorado College 22-6 and St. Louis U. downed Wichita 7-0. New Mexico continued its unbeaten string, stopping Texas Mines 14-0, and Gonzaga surprised Idaho with a 19-0 walloping.

Joe Brogan South With Fordham II

Joseph P. Brogan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Brogan of Poughkeepsie, formerly of Kingston, left Wednesday with the Fordham football team for New Orleans, where the Rams play Tulane today. Joe is assistant manager of the team. He is a graduate of Kingston High School and has many friends here.

Van Gonsic Breaks 100 Targets to Win Cosmopolitan Title

By breaking 100 straight targets, J. J. Van Gonsic, of 326 Albany avenue, a member of the New York A. C. and well known among local gunners, was the winner of the 26th annual shooting of the Cosmopolitan Championship over the Jamaica Bay traps of the Bergen Beach Gun Club Thursday. Only once before in the long history of the shoot has a straight string of 100 taken the title. Back in 1935 Rube Helsel, the Long Island City gunner, also broke every target.

In all, 56 gunners took part in the shoot, which opened the winter trapshooting season. In addition to the championship there was a ten-man team race between the Bergen Beach Club and the North Jersey Gun Club, the home gunners winning by 973 to 971 out of a possible 1,000 targets a team.

Patrolman George Soderlund of Pulaski, N. Y., is exhibiting a quintuplet potato grown in his garden. Four small potatoes surround one fair-sized one, all being perfect in shape and form.

Tomorrow afternoon's fifth City League championship playoff game slated for the Athletic Field at 2 o'clock will see either Jones Dairy of the Independents crowned 1939 pennant winners.

Independents will bank on Bush to carry them to their second successive flag, while the Dairy men will entrust the honor of capturing the pennant to the peer of local hurlers, Charley Neff. Riding high on the wings of last week's thrilling 1-0 win, the Milkmen are primed for the "clinch."

Championship Clash
With the 1939 City League championship at stake, both clubs will present their strongest lineups for the two-loop followers. All accommodations, extra bleachers, special police protection and broadcasting unit are in readiness for the year's finale on the local baseball front. Three umpires will again govern play in tomorrow's thrilling drama that is expected to see more than 2,000 massed at the Athletic Field.

Manager Dawkins will have Big Gene Rider, who made his series debut last week, back in harness tomorrow. Bing Van Etten, Lay, Beck, Martin and crew have been powerless against Neff's slants. For Joneses, Milly Berardi, Zadan, Van Buren and company are all set to annex the 1939 crown. All in all, tomorrow's tilt promises to be a whale of a ball game.

Indies Ready
Always a great club under pressure, the Indies will be out to annex their second league pennant and continue their superiority over the hard-fighting Dari-Rich boys.

Nine Old Decayed Trees Cut Down in Dutch Churchyard

The Gilbert Tree Service men, who have been removing the decayed and dangerous trees from the old Dutch Churchyard, were finishing up the job this morning of splitting up and carting away the last of the large trunks.

Milton Gilbert said altogether his men removed nine of the old trees and carted away about 20 cords of wood. While he said he had made no attempt to ascertain the exact age of the trees, he judged that they ran around 75 to 100 years old. Only one of them, the tall old locust which stood near the Main street entrance to the churchyard, was sound. This tree was taken down because it was loosened at the roots in the heavy blow in September, 1938, and it was feared might cause trouble in case of another windstorm.

Some of the other trees were very badly decayed and might easily have caused trouble. The stubby old maple near the Byer cigar store was almost entirely gone, with but a thin shell of wood on the outside. The large maple at the corner of Main and Wall streets also was dangerously decayed.

The logging operations on the churchyard have been the source of much interest to residents and passersby and there have been many comments on the fact that so many of the trees originally set out were of the soft or swamp maple variety, instead of hard maple or elm.

Mr. Gilbert for nearly nine years was connected with the United States and the New York State Forestry Service. During the period that the CCC camp was located at Boiceville he was one of the dozen or more foresters connected with that establishment. For a year and a half his home has been at Olive Bridge, but he also has an office at Spencertown.

Twinkling Stars
The twinkling of stars is a rapid shaking or vibration of their light caused mainly by the turmoil of the atmosphere—currents and strata of different temperatures intermingling and flowing past one another. A star's light seems to come from a mere point, so that when its rays are scattered by irregular refraction, at one instant very few rays reach the eye, and at another many. This accounts for the seeming changes of brightness in a twinkling star. Ordinarily the bright planets are not seen to twinkle because of their large apparent disks, made up of a multitude of points, which therefore maintain a general average of brightness.

U. S. Information Service Gets Many Odd Requests

He is a taxpayer. So he writes to the United States information service about this: An English friend is sending him some riding boots. But he has heard that English and American shoe sizes differ. He takes a 6½ D in American. What is it in English?

That's a sample of the problems that are dumped into the lap of the Great White Father. They are answered.

The agriculture department got these:
"We have a cow and her hide is coming out around the neck."
"How can I raise and market tarantulas?"
"Send information on cockroaches. I will thank you very much. Please rush."
And this one:
"Send booklet telling how little ailments turn into big ones. How can I tell such an ailment when I wake up in the morning with a coated stomach? I may guess wrong." Here's a big business deal: "Is there any place in the government I can get free money. That is money I don't pay back. I need $1,200." What would you do about snakes in the cellar; would you besmirch your patriotism if you hauled down a dirty American flag and washed it? It's all in the day's work for the Great White Father.

Three-Mile Limit

The idea of a three-mile limit of jurisdiction off the coast was first set down by Hugo Grotius, a brilliant Dutch lawyer, in 1608, in his "Mare Liberum," wherein he observed that the sovereignty and jurisdiction of any state extended as far over the marginal seas "as those who sail in that part of the sea can be compelled from the shore as if they were on land." A little later Cornelius van Bynkershoek, a judge of the supreme court of appeal of Holland, in his "De Dominio Maris Dissertatio," Caput II, pages 364, 365, expressed Grotius' idea by saying that the control of the land over the sea extends as far as cannon will carry and that "the control from the land ends where the power of men's weapons ends."

Financial and Commercial

Exchange Prices Show Few Losses

Although the London market, advanced and American shares were strong at Amsterdam, stocks on the New York Exchange showed small losses for the day after an early showing of strength. Closing prices, which were at the lowest levels of the day, left industrials in the Dow-Jones averages with a net loss for the day of 49 point, to 150.85; rails showed a decline of 30 point, to 33.65 and the utilities were off .18 to 25.34. Volume was 740,000 shares.

Commodities were off slightly as a whole, but the market showed little trend. Cotton was unchanged to six points lower. Wheat was off as much as 5-8 cents a bushel. World sugar futures showed advances of ten points but weakened, and sold lower. New highs for the season were established in nearby silk deliveries. October reaching $3.12 a pound.

In the bond market investment grade securities advanced in heavy trading and government securities were firm.

Chrysler Corp. plants remain virtually closed as negotiations with the CIO continue and company refuses demand for a union shop. With substantial curtailment in Briggs Mfg. plant and other companies furnishing Chrysler with parts, the Chrysler slow-down production strikes have thrown over 50,000 workers out of employment.

Figures released by Secretary of Commerce Hopkins show that exports of U. S. merchandise in September, first month of the European war, were valued at approximately $283,000,000. This is 16 per cent above August and 16 per cent above the total for September, 1938.

Swiss May Store Up Supplies in Tanks

Plan to Sink Receptacles Below Beds of Lakes.

ZURICH—Swiss householders will be able to have their own stores of food buried 120 feet below the waterlevel of the lakes and rivers, safe from the heaviest bomb, if an ingenious scheme devised by wealthy Senator Gottlieb Duttweiler is put into practice.

Duttweiler, who is Switzerland's No. 1 provision dealer, with one business which alone has a turnover of about 60,000,000 Swiss francs, has founded a "Stock Tank association" on co-operative lines.

The co-operative plans to sink sheet-iron tanks into the earth below lake and rivers, each tank filled with foodstuffs or raw materials. The co-operative will sell shares, the holders of which will have the right to demand repayment in goods.

Tests are said to have proved that the tanks would be safe from air attack as the water would absorb the effect of any bomb. The federal economic department has approved the plan.

It is said that such technical problem as how to anchor the tanks so that they are immovable, how to fill and empty them and air the goods, have been satisfactorily solved.

The cost of storage is low, including amortization of the tanks. Temperature would be maintained at a constant level, so that the loss in weight would be negligible, and storage of such foodstuffs as eggs, fresh fruit, potatoes would be possible.

Cattle Branding Remains Best Method of Marking

CHEYENNE, WYO.—The cattle brand, introduced in the early days of Wyoming's history when stock raising was its only large industry, still is the most practicable and humane method of marking the animals. Russell Thorp, secretary of the State Stock Growers association, insists.

Although the large herds that roamed the state's almost limitless expanses when "rustling" was the most serious crime no longer exist, Thorp said that Wyoming still has thousands of registered brands.

"The burned brand is the most successful method of marking cattle," he explained. "Reports that the brand is inhumane are false. An hour after the average calf is marked and returned to its mother, the scar no longer bothers the young animal."

"It is the most practicable because it makes possible the detection of frauds. Experts can tell instantly whether the brand scar is the original or has been altered by one of several methods."

Although rustling is not so common as when ranchers covered thousands of acres of Wyoming's prairies, "rubber tire" cattle thieves still carry on a lucrative business, he said. They load the animals into swift trucks, a few at a time, and rush them to distant points for sale. Gone, however, he said, are the large-scale operations of 70 years ago, when it was possible to drive off a herd of several thousand animals and evade capture.

Movies Aid Jury In Murder Trial

Los Angeles, Oct. 14 (AP)—Jurors, who convicted DeWitt Clinton Cook, 20, of first degree murder in the bludgeoning of Anya Sosoyeva told Superior Judge Thomas L. Ambrose sound pictures aided them materially in reaching the verdict.

The all-male jury did not recommend leniency and the mandatory sentence of death in the gas chamber will be pronounced Tuesday.

Cook originally confessed killing the former follies dancer for whatever money she might have in her purse. Police made sound pictures as the Hollywood printer re-enacted the slaying with the aid of a girl, who volunteered to pose as Miss Sosoyeva.

Motion pictures have been used before in trials, but this was the first sound film shown a jury.
